

“Press F to Fight on!” keybind

Author: cestreitman@

Updated: 05/25/2026

ENG: email@

UX: email@

Description: What is it?

- We’re going to add a keybind “F” to the “Fight on!” option in the Coliseum. “Fight on!” is the button that transitions players from one battle to the next

Problem: What problem is this solving?

- Right now, the battles themselves are all completable by keybind only. The user has no need to click with a mouse. Exception: the “Fight on!” button to transition battles
- Need to click causes small friction, as the player has to move their hand. Adding keybind F for the “Fight on!” button renders the entire battle experience keybound

Why: How do we know this is a real problem and worth solving?

- According to this report, adding “press F to fight on” is a top-requested change to FR
- Mirrored by threads in the Suggestions forums and memes in FRD

Success: How do we know if we’ve solved this problem?

- Battle frequency: Based on the Keystroke-Level Model, replacing the click with a keypress saves ~0.7s, for ~23% faster battles (2.4s vs 3.1s). Battles include fixed animation time, so the realized speed-up is roughly half that: ~10-12% faster end-to-end
- Sentiment: Net positive reception in announcement thread and major FR subforums

Audience: Who are we building for?

- Coliseum users, who comprise the majority of the serious/core playerbase

What: Roughly, what does this look like in the product?

- Eng adds keybind to the transition surface
- UX adds a visual “F” keybind on the “Fight on!” button in the style of the other battle keybinds

When: When does it ship and what are the milestones?

- Tack onto next product release as a QOL addition at the bottom (preferred)
- OR, wait for next coliseum-specific update or product release, and launch then